Torrid Heat Wave Hovers Over Northwest Today

CLAIMING AT LEAST FIVE MORE VICTIMS OF HEAT

OLE C. NELSON, 65, VIRGINIA, MINN. DIES IN MILL CITY RESTAURANT

C. V. KERKOVE, HATFIELD, AGGRAVATED BY HEAT COMITS SUICIDE

St. Paul, Minn., July 9.—(UP)—Torrid heat hovered over the northwest to day after claiming at least five more victims.

Ole C. Nelson, 65, Virginia, Minn., died within a few minutes after he collapsed in a Minneapolis restaurant. C. V. Kerkove, 50, Hatfield, committed suicide apparently because the heat aggravated his illness of long standing.

Temperatures reached record-breaking heights. Pipestone reported 100, the twin cities had 89 as an official reading but weather bureau officials explained that the temperatures on the street in the sunlight probably were much hotter.

Relief in the form of thunderstorms was forecast for some sections of the northwest but most localities will have to struggle through the present heat wave for at least another day, the weather bureau said.

St. Paul, Minn., July 9.—(UP)—Thermometers spurted toward blood heat and new records today in the third day of the northwest heat wave that has taken a toll of lives, including three suicides.

Weather prognosticators reporting temperatures from 7 to 10 degrees above yesterday's record averages said no relief was in sight.

Even The Pass, Man., a thousand miles north of the international boundary, was sweltering today.

Temperatures at The Pass were only a degree below the mark at St. Paul where 88 was passed before 11 a. m., only a point below the season's record.

Record season's marks were set all over the northwest yesterday. The death list grew hourly. The dead today include two drownings, two suicides caused by the heat and a fatal heat prostration. Four were reported dead from heat yesterday.

The dead reported today were:

Ole C. Nelson, 65, Virginia, Minn., heat prostration, at Minneapolis.

C. V. Kerkove, 50, Hatfield, suicide because of heat.

Henry Olson, 20, Grey Eagle, drowned in Bass lake.

Ignace B. Vucik, 45, Minneapolis, drowned (possible suicide).

William Hardwick, 60, St. Paul, suicide because of heat.

The body of Ignace B. Vucik, 45, Minneapolis, was taken from the Mississippi river today, death was due to drowning but police were uncertain whether it was accidental or suicide.

William Hardwick, 60, St. Paul, depressed by the heat and a July 4 jail term for drunkenness, shot himself to death today. His was the third heat suicide reported in the last three days.

St. Paul, Minn., July 9.—The temperature passed 90 before bedtime today setting a new heat record for the year. The previous mark of 89 was set yesterday.

The temperature reached 92 shortly after 1 p. m.

Brainerd, Minn., July 9.—(UP)—With the temperature rapidly mounting on a mark of 82 at 8 a. m., a record heat mark was in prospect today. Yesterday the government thermometer registered 94, the high point for the year.

Grey Eagle, Minn., July 9.—(UP)—Diving from a springboard into 12 feet of water, Henry Olson, 20, was drowned in Bass lake near here yesterday.

Olson dove from the springboard and came to the surface several times. Three companions did not realize he was drowning until he had been under for some time. The body was recovered two hours later.

4 GUNMEN WHO HELD UP BANK ELUDE PURSUIT

Lake Preston, S. D., July 9.—(UP)—Disappearing as they roared their way toward the Minnesota boundary, the four gunmen who held up the Community State bank yesterday were thought today to have successfully eluded pursuit.

The bandits were believed headed for the Twin Cities, but sheriffs and deputies posted on all roads leading east from South Dakota said they had seen no trace of the men.

Loot taken in the robbery was estimated at $8,000 in cash and $4,000 in bonds.

INDIA GOVERNMENT CONFISCATES PRESS OF MAHATMA GANDHI

Bombay, July 9.—(UP)—The government of India confiscated today the press on which Mahatma Gandhi's passive resistance papers, Young India and Navjivan, were published.

The confiscation was the result of the editor's refusal to furnish security required under Viceroy Lord Irwin's revival of the press restriction laws.

GOVERNOR REED ATTACKS HOOVER ADMINISTRATION

CHALLENGES ITS WHOLE ATTITUDE TOWARD AGRICULTURE

CHARGES ATTEMPT TO SUBORDINATE FARMING TO INDUSTRY

Hays, Kans., July 9.—(UP)—Governor Clyde M. Reed of Kansas, in a speech prepared for delivery later today, challenged the whole attitude of the Hoover administration toward agriculture, charged the administration with attempting to subordinate agriculture to industry and questioned the good faith of Alexander Legge, chairman of the farm board.

Reed's speech, a bitter denunciation of the administration's policies, was to be made from the same platform on which Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde and Legge appeared to urge upon the Kansas farmers a reduction of their wheat acreage.

Coming into the nation's greatest wheat producing state to preach their gospel, the government officials were met with an attack by the governor of that state, who took outspoken and direct issue with their whole platform.

The governor attacked the farm board for offering reduction of acreage as the only method to remedy the agricultural situation. He said the administration was denying the farmer a square deal as regards foreign trade. In the past, he said, agriculture had enjoyed about 40 per cent of the foreign trade which President Hoover had helped build as secretary of commerce, adding:

"Now, for the first time in the 141 years of our national existence, it is proposed to definitely subordinate agriculture to industry by asking it to be restricted in its production to that amount necessary to supply those occupied in the industrial world."

By inference, Reed charged that Legge, former head of the International Harvester company, was persuading American farmers to cut their acreage without producing an exportable surplus while implement manufacturers exported their machines to foreign growers who could raise wheat formerly supplied by this country.

"There is at present," the governor said, "no substantial over-production of wheat in the world, but there may be if the American manufacturer of agricultural implements can bring it about in order to create a market for his excess production. In order to meet the situation thus being created the American wheat farmer is asked to reduce the scope of his operations."

"Assuming that a reduction in one or the other of these industries were desirable, would it be best for the country to have citizen on the wheat farm or in an agricultural implement factory; is it fair, and is it sound public policy to ask the wheat farmer to leave his land in order to permit an expansion of the agricultural implement trade in foreign countries so as to enable them to better compete with the American wheat farmer."

In the morning program, Secretary Hyde expounded the principles he and Legge had advanced in Nebraska and Colorado—that increasing wheat production abroad demanded the American farmer grow less wheat if he wanted a good price for it.

France Votes Large Sum For Its National Defense

Paris, July 9.—(UP)—The finance commission of the Chamber of Deputies approved today an additional credit of 1,128,000,000 francs (about $45,000,000) for national defense.

The action was considered in many sources as a direct answer to the recent increase of about $26,000,000 in the Italian national defense budgets.

What's Happening in Chicago? Has Underworld Declared War on the Newspapers of That City

WHAT IS REAL SIGNIFICANCE OF LINGLE MURDER?

THESE AND SIMILAR QUESTIONS ASKED BY NEWSPAPER READERS

FLOOD OF CONFUSING DEVELOPMENTS IN THE INTERESTING CASE

What's happening in Chicago? Has the underworld declared war on the newspapers? Are police reporters in league with the underworld? What is the real significance of the Lingle murder? These and similar questions are being asked by newspaper readers as a result of the flood of confusing and sometimes conflicting developments which have occurred since the murder of Alfred J. Lingle, a special series of United Press dispatches from Chicago designed to clarify the moving crime picture in the light of the Lingle murder's many ramifications.

By EARL J. JOHNSON (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Chicago, July 9.—(UP)—Occasionally in the history of Chicago crime one murder becomes "La Cause Celebre" of a furious attack on the underworld. Such a murder five years ago was the killing of Assistant State's Attorney William McSwiggan.

Such a crime was the Moran gang massacre on St. Valentine's day in 1929.

Such a crime also was the slaying four weeks ago of Alfred J. Lingle, police reporter for the Chicago Tribune.

But the Lingle murder promises to dwarf all previous gang killings in the extent of its ramifications, in its significance as signaling a final showdown on whether Chicago can eliminate the evils which have given her a bad name.

At the same time it presents problems with which Chicago has not had to deal before. It casts suspicion upon other reporters for the very newspapers which have led the fight against organized crime and has set the papers themselves to sniping at each other's motives. This and other developments will be reported in subsequent dispatches. Today's is devoted to the main to Lingle, the reporter-racketeer, and to the murder which ended his mysterious dual career.

Aside from the private activities in which he is now believed to have played such questionable roles, "Jake" Lingle was the type of metropolitan newspaper reporter that has been exploited on the stage in recent seasons. He was familiar with police and criminals. He seldom wrote the stories he "covered," but telephoned his facts to re-write men in the city room of his paper. Occasionally he was asked to have private investigations of crimes or of suspected criminals for the files of his paper or for exposes of crime which appeared in the Tribune under the signatures of more talented writers. For the better part of the 18 years that Lingle worked for the Tribune he was assigned to these tasks.

2 CRUISING IN A PACKING BOX SAVED BY POLICE

Chicago, July 9.—(UP)—Two 12-year-old boys who went cruising on Lake Michigan in a packing box were considered a bit dumb by police officers who rescued them just before the crate sank 300 yards from the end of Navy pier. Later, they decided perhaps the boys were not so dumb after all as the addresses they gave were for a vacant lot.

Thus, when a wiry gunman with a silk glove on the left hand with which he wielded his pistol, shot Lingle in the back of the head, in a pedestrian subway beneath Michigan Boulevard on June 12, it was natural to assume that gangland was attempting to intimidate the press. The Tribune itself voiced the theory that their reporter had been slain because he knew too much about gangland, that gangland was attempting to intimidate the press for exposing gang crime. The Tribune accepted the challenge on that basis.

Then slowly at first light began to fall on other phases of the crime. Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Tribune, heard rumors that Lingle was no Don Mellet, that he lived in a hotel suite far too expensive for a police reporter.

Investigations of his private life, his finances, his habits, revealed Lingle as more racketeer than reporter. It was learned that he had used his position with the powerful Tribune to act as a go-between for gangsters with the police. He was so friendly with former Police Chief William Russell that the two were reported to have had a joint brokerage account which at one time was built up to $200,000. At the same time he was an intimate of Scarface Al Capone and was Capone's house guest at Miami, Fla. His income was estimated at $60,000 a year.

These revelations set investigators to following new trails. The theory that Lingle was killed to intimidate the press was abandoned. It seemed more likely that he had been killed for violating some law of the underworld in his transactions with gangsters.

It was inevitable that the Lingle murder, in the light of his gang and police connections, would have far reaching effects on the Chicago anti-crime war. These effects and the personalities they involve will be the subjects of further dispatches in this series.

THINK CAPONE GANG HAS A 'TORTURE CHAMBER'

2 CHARRED POSTS FOUND IN BASEMENT CICERO NIGHT CLUB

ENEMIES OF GANG MAY HAVE UNDERGONE ORDEAL BY FIRE

Chicago, July 9.—(UP)—Evidence which police interpreted as meaning that the Capone gang maintained a "torture chamber" in the basement of Cicero night club was brought to light today with the discovery of two charred posts.

The posts coupled with the mysterious disappearance of several gangsters in the last few months gave rise to reports that enemies of the gang controlled by "Scarface Al" Capone may have undergone ordeals of fire.

The posts were about six feet high and were equipped with hooks suitable for binding victims. They were found by Alexander Jamie, special prohibition agent, who raided Ralph Capone's Montmartre night club in Cicero, headquarters of "Scarface" Al's gang.

Jamie said the posts were imbedded six feet in the concrete floor of the basement. They did not support the floor above, and both were deeply charred.

Congressman's Car Hits a Coal Truck

Chicago, July 9.—(UP)—Congressman Florian Lampert of Oshkosh, Wis., was recovering today from injuries received when his automobile crashed into a coal truck near Chicago Heights. With Charles F. Nolan, Georgetown University student, driving his car, Lampert, was on his way home from Washington. His collar numerous bruises. Mrs. Lampert wired last night that she was leaving Washington immediately to be with her husband.

GASOLINE DROPS TO LOW PRICE IN PORTLAND, ORE.

Portland, Ore., July 9.—(UP)—Never since automobile travel became general has the price of gasoline dropped so low here as it did today when the retailer and wholesaler were receiving only 6½ cents per gallon.

The price, beat down cent by cent from the accepted retail price of 21½ cents at the start of the "war," was generally 10½ cents at city filling stations today, including a 4-cent state gasoline tax.

PRIZE WINNING HORSE RUNS AWAY KILLING MISTRESS

Chicago, July 9.—(UP)—Miss Helen Blair, 17, daughter of William McCormick Blair, Lake Bluff, Ill., died last night of injuries received two hours earlier when the prize winning horse which she was riding ran away and plunged into a fence, throwing her to the ground. Miss Blair, whose parents are socially prominent, was to have made her debut next fall.

DISSENTING OPINION ON FREIGHT RATES

COMMISSIONER PORTER OF I. C. C. AT VARIANCE WITH RULING

7 OF THE 10 COMMISSIONERS JOINED IN MAJORITY REPORT

Washington, July 9.—(UP)—Increased freight rates ordered into effect by the Interstate Commerce Commission in western trunk line territory, are in some cases 25 per cent in excess of similar rates charged by railroads in Illinois, Commissioner Porter declared in a dissenting opinion.

The increase was ordered by the commission yesterday, with seven of the ten commissioners joining in the report. Commissioners Woodcock and Brainerd concurred in part, while only Porter dissented.

The new rates apply to "class" shipments, manufactured articles. Such raw materials as coal and lumber are not affected.

Porter said the rates prescribed for Zone 1, western trunk line territory, embracing Wisconsin, Eastern Minnesota, Iowa and Northern Missouri, are 25 per cent above those in Illinois. He asserted the majority of the commission was over zealous in removing discriminations in western territory, while less zealous in properly relating those rates to those in the country east of the Mississippi.

The increased rates prescribed for Zone 1 in the western area in some instances, Porter said, will exceed 90 per cent.

Declaring such increases would result in forcing many shippers out of business, Porter said long haul shippers would have an advantage over western shippers within their own territory under the new rate schedules. He declared the Zone 1 scale should be reduced at least 10 per cent on the average below the new rates.

The commission estimated railroads would gain an additional $10,000,000 or $12,000,000 in revenue annually as a result of the new rates which take effect not later than November 1.

3 CHILDREN AND ADULT LOSE THEIR LIVES

MOTORBOAT STRIKES REEF NEAR GREEN BAY, WIS. AND CAPSIZES

6 OTHER OCCUPANTS OF BOAT ARE RESCUED BY TWO FISHERMEN

Green Bay, Wis., July 9.—(UP)—Three children and an adult lost their lives in Green Bay last night when the motor boat in which they were riding struck a reef and capsized. Six other occupants of the boat were rescued after heroic work by two fishermen.

The dead include: Ray Raymond, 38; Juliana Zellnes, 12; Alice Warden, 10; Edwin Hansen, 9.

Among those rescued were Police Judge George Arends, his brother, Otto; Rose Mary Freix, Eunice Pfoten-hauer, 10; Betty Cauwenberg, 9; Jean Raymond, 4; Ruth Raymond, 2; and Betty Slatley.

All are from Green Bay and had been celebrating the birthday of Judge Arends' niece at his summer home on Green Bay.

SIGHT WRECKED PLANE IN BALTIC

Stettin, Germany, July 9.—(UP)—A message from the captain of the German seamer Spes, anchored off the island of Riems, near Greifswald, said the ship had attempted to approach a wrecked Berlin-Stockholm seaplane in the Baltic but had been prevented by high seas. Five persons were aboard the seaplane, including the American John L. Udkholder and Miss Ruth Northrup, the message said.

FLYING SOUTH ATLANTIC FROM BRAZIL TO AFRICA

OIL LINE TROUBLE FORCES DOWN FRENCH FLIER AND TWO COMPANIONS

PICKED UP BY STEAMER 300 MILES OFF DAKAR POINT

Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, July 9.—(UP)—The Aeropostale Co., announced today that Jean Mermoz, flying across the South Atlantic from Brazil to Africa, had descended short of his goal near the Aeropostale Steamer Phoece, one of the ships which were stationed along the route to aid the plane in case of distress.

The position of the Phoece was not given in the first messages, but it was believed to be well towards the African coast.

The Aeropostale Co., was advised that the Phoece had saved Mermoz and his two companions, as well as the mail they carried.

The spot where the fliers were picked up was about 300 miles off Dakar. The plane was having engine trouble when it sighted the Phoece, and Mermoz signalled his intention of landing.

The plane's descent was forced by oil-line trouble. It had sufficient gasoline for seven hours more flying, or more than enough to take it to Dakar when forced down. Mermoz made an easy landing in moderate seas.

The Phoece took the seaplane in tow after rescuing the fliers and their mail and proceeded slowly towards Dakar, where it was not due until late tomorrow. Another plane will then speed the mail to Paris. Since the seaplane was equipped with floats, the mail was undamaged.

The plane left Ormifm Lagoon, south of Natal, Brazil, at 2:44 p. m. E. S. T., yesterday. Besides Mermoz, the crew consisted of Jean D'Abry, navigator, and Leopold Gimle, radio operator. It was attempting the first eastward crossing of the South Atlantic, a difficult feat yet to be accomplished. The same plane crossed the Atlantic from Africa to Brazil last month, inaugurating French airmail service to South America.

SUPERIOR MAN RUNS DOWN AND KILLS SMALL BOY

Minneapolis, July 9.—(UP)—The county attorney's office today questioned Herman A. Aronson, 44, Superior, Wis., concerning the accident yesterday in which a small boy was run down and killed by his car.

The boy, Robert Goodman, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Velik Goodman, was struck by the car as he was playing in the street in front of his home.

Aronson, who was driving the car, was held by the police for questioning but released after an interview with John Arnoldy, inspector in the county attorney's office. He was ordered to report today for further examination.

Minneapolis police are running over the boy in a statement made to them after the accident. Aronson said he did not know he had struck the child until his daughter called his attention to it, a moment later. Aronson was listed in police records as owner and driver of the machine.

Dirt Slide Pours Down on Water Tunnel Workers

New York, July 9.—(UP)—Tons of dirt and rock loosened by a recent rainstorm, poured down on 20 men working in a water supply tunnel 500 feet below street level in the Bronx today, killing one man and injuring nine others, two of them seriously. Police, aided by workmen, finally dug out the nine injured men and the body of Michael Kelley, 27, of 84 Kimball Avenue, Yonkers.

ADDED DIVIDENDS THROUGH FARMING SCIENTIFICALLY

Breckenridge, Minn., July 9.—(UP)—Added dividends through scientific farming were sought today by Minnesota farmers who left on a three-day motor trek to "show" farms of Minnesota, North Dakota and Manitoba.

Delegations from Breckenridge and Cass county and from Moorhead, Perley, Hendrum, Halstad, Shelley, Neilsville and Climax will make the trip.

They will visit the largest sugar beet plantation in the Red river country, model legume farms, prize Holstein dairy herds, and wheat farms in North Dakota and Manitoba.

They will also visit the farms, gardens and orchards of the Manitoba experimental farm at Morden, Man.

2 CHARRED POSTS FOUND IN BASEMENT CICERO NIGHT CLUB

ENEMIES OF GANG MAY HAVE UNDERGONE ORDEAL BY FIRE

Chicago, July 9.—(UP)—Evidence which police interpreted as meaning that the Capone gang maintained a "torture chamber" in the basement of Cicero night club was brought to light today with the discovery of two charred posts.

The posts coupled with the mysterious disappearance of several gangsters in the last few months gave rise to reports that enemies of the gang controlled by "Scarface" Al Capone may have undergone ordeals of fire.

The posts were about six feet high and were equipped with hooks suitable for binding victims. They were found by Alexander Jamie, special prohibition agent, who raided Ralph Capone's Montmartre night club in Cicero, headquarters of "Scarface" Al's gang.

Jamie said the posts were imbedded six feet in the concrete floor of the basement. They did not support the floor above, and both were deeply charred.

GASOLINE DROPS TO LOW PRICE IN PORTLAND, ORE.

Portland, Ore., July 9.—(UP)—Never since automobile travel became general has the price of gasoline dropped so low here as it did today when the retailer and wholesaler were receiving only 6 1/2 cents per gallon.

The price, beat down cent by cent from the accepted retail price of 21 1/2 cents at the start of the "war," was generally 10 1/2 cents at city filling stations today, including a 4-cent state gasoline tax.

Miss Blair, whose parents are socially prominent, was to have made her debut next fall.

DISSENTING OPINION ON FREIGHT RATES

COMMISSIONER PORTER OF I. C. C. AT VARIANCE WITH RULING

7 OF THE 10 COMMISSIONERS JOINED IN MAJORITY REPORT

Washington, July 9.—(UP)—Increased freight rates ordered into effect by the Interstate Commerce Commission in western trunk line territory, are in some cases 25 per cent in excess of similar rates charged by railroads in Illinois, Commissioner Porter declared in a dissenting opinion.

The increase was ordered by the commission yesterday, with seven of the ten commissioners joining in the report. Commissioners Woodcock and Brainerd concurred in part, while only Porter dissented.

The new rates apply to "class" shipments, manufactured articles. Such raw materials as coal and lumber are not affected.

Porter said the rates prescribed for Zone 1, western trunk line territory, embracing Wisconsin, Eastern Minnesota, Iowa and Northern Missouri, are 25 per cent above those in Illinois. He asserted the majority of the commission was over zealous in removing discriminations in western territory, while less zealous in properly relating those rates to those in the country east of the Mississippi.

The increased rates prescribed for Zone 1 in the western area in some instances, Porter said, will exceed 90 per cent.

Declaring such increases would result in forcing many shippers out of business, Porter said long haul shippers would have an advantage over western shippers within their own territory under the new rate schedule. He declared the Zone 1 scale should be reduced at least 10 per cent on the average below the new rates.

The commission estimated railroads would gain an additional $10,000,000 or $12,000,000 in revenue annually as a result of the new rates which take effect not later than November 1.

3 CHILDREN AND ADULT LOSE THEIR LIVES

MOTORBOAT STRIKES REEF NEAR GREEN BAY, WIS. AND CAPSIZES

6 OTHER OCCUPANTS OF BOAT ARE RESCUED BY TWO FISHERMEN

Green Bay, Wis., July 9.—(UP)—Three children and an adult lost their lives in Green Bay last night when the motor boat in which they were riding struck a reef and capsized. Six other occupants of the boat were rescued after heroic work by two fishermen.

The dead include: Ray Raymaker, 38; Juliana Zellnes, 12; Alice Worden, 10; Edwin Haase, 9.

Among those rescued were Police Judge George Arends, his brother, Otto; Rose Mary Freix, Eunice Pfotenbauer, 10; Betty Cauwenberg, 9; Jean Raymaker, 4; Ruth Raymaker, 2; and Betty Slatley.

All are from Green Bay and had been celebrating the birthday of Judge Arends' niece at his summer home on Green Bay.

SIGHT WRECKED PLANE IN BALTIC

Stettin, Germany, July 9.—(UP)—A message from the captain of the German seamer Spes, anchored off the island of Riems, near Grefswald, said the ship had attempted to approach a wrecked Berlin-Stockholm seaplane in the Baltic but had been prevented by high seas. Five persons were aboard the seaplane, including the American John L. Udholder and Miss Ruth Northrup, the message said.

FLYING SOUTH ATLANTIC FROM BRAZIL TO AFRICA

OIL LINE TROUBLE FORCES DOWN FRENCH FLIER AND TWO COMPANIONS

PICKED UP BY STEAMER 300 MILES OFF DAKAR POINT

Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, July 9.—(UP)—The Aeropostale Co., announced today that Jean Mermoz, flying across the South Atlantic from Brazil to Africa, had descended short of his goal near the Aeropostale Steamer Phoece, one of the ships which were stationed along the route to aid the plane in case of distress.

The position of the Phoece was not given in the first messages, but it was believed to be well towards the African coast.

The Aeropostale Co., was advised that the Phoece had saved Mermoz and his two companions, as well as the mail they carried.

The spot where the fliers were picked up was about 300 miles off Dakar. The plane was having engine trouble when it sighted the Phoece, and Mermoz signalled his intention of landing.

The plane's descent was forced by oil-line trouble. It had sufficient gasoline for seven hours more flying, or more than enough to take it to Dakar when forced down. Mermoz made an easy landing in moderate seas.

The Phoece took the seaplane in tow after rescuing the fliers and their mail and proceeded slowly towards Dakar, where it was not due until late tomorrow. Another plane will then speed the mail to Paris. Since the seaplane was equipped with floaters, the mail was undamaged.

The plane left Omfim Lagoon, south of Natal, Brazil, at 2:44 p. m. E. S. T. yesterday. Besides Mermoz, the crew consisted of Jean D'Abry, navigator, and Leopold Gimie, radio operator. It was attempting the first eastward crossing of the South Atlantic, a difficult feat yet to be accomplished. The same plane crossed the Atlantic from Africa to Brazil last month, inaugurating French airmail service to South America.

SUPERIOR MAN RUNS DOWN AND KILLS SMALL BOY

Minneapolis, July 9.—(UP)—The county attorney's office today questioned Herman A. Aronson, 44, Superior, Wis., concerning the accident yesterday in which a small boy was run down and killed by his car.

The boy, Robert Goodman, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Velik Goodman, was struck by the car as he was playing in the street in front of his home.

Aronson, who was driving the car, was held by the police for questioning but released after an interview with John Arnoldy, inspector in the county attorney's office. He was ordered to report today for further examination.

Minneapolis police officials said that Aronson admitted running over the boy in a statement made to them after the accident. Aronson said he did not know he had struck the child until his daughter called his attention to it, a moment later. Aronson was listed in police records as owner and driver of the machine.

Dirt Slide Pours Down on Water Tunnel Workers

New York, July 9.—(UP)—Tons of dirt and rock loosened by a recent rainstorm, poured down on 20 men working in a water supply tunnel, 500 feet below street level in the Bronx today, killing one man and injuring nine others, two of them seriously. Police, aided by workmen, finally dug out the nine injured men and the body of Michael Kelley, 27, of 84 Kimball Avenue, Yonkers.

ADDED DIVIDENDS THROUGH FARMING SCIENTIFICALLY

Breckenridge, Minn., July 9.—(UP)—Added dividends through scientific farming were sought today by Minnesota farmers who left on a three-day motor trek to "show" farms of Minnesota, North Dakota and Manitoba.

Delegations from Breckenridge and Cass county and from Moorhead, Perley, Hendrum, Halstad, Shelley, Nellville and Climax will make the trip.

They will visit the largest sugar beet plantation in the Red river country, model legume farms, prize Holstein dairy herds, and wheat farms in North Dakota and Manitoba.

They will also visit the farms, gardens and orchards of the Manitoba experimental farm at Morden, Man.

There was a burglary last night, but whether it was done by followers of the circus or by someone else is not known. The home of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. The hired girl was out last evening. BRAINERD
25 Years Ago

July 9, 1905

There was a burglary last night, but whether it was done by followers of the circus or by someone else is not known. The home of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Peterson across from St. Joseph's hospital was entered about 9 o'clock through the south window and the thieves had easy access to everything in the house as both Mr. and Mrs. Peterson were away at the lake. The hired girl was out last evening. The house was ransacked from cellar to garret and it is thought that the burglars made away with a lot of stuff but of course this can not be ascertained until Mr. and Mrs. Peterson return home. The hired girl had some money but the burglars did not find this. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson have been notified.

Hides of Little Value

Compared with the size of the animals elephant hides have very little commercial value. Many commercial articles in which leather is employed have been made of tanned elephant skin, but the skin is not very satisfactory for such purposes.

FINE PLAYS HERE

Mother and Daughter Greeted by Brainerd People on Homecoming Engagement

A packed tent greeted the Curtis-Christopher Players at their opening performance at the tent theatre at the corner of Sixth and Oak streets last evening and so absorbed did the large audience become in the play "The Broken Road" that they forgot all about the heat.

Encore upon encore followed each act while each performer during the vaudeville sketches received hearty acclamations.

Her mother, known to the stage as Erma Brent, shared equal honors. Both are former Brainerd people and their appearance here is in the way of a homecoming.

The supporting cast of Edgar Harris Jason, leading man, Curtis V. Moe, Anna Young, William Davidson, Edw. Ojala, Kendrick Wilson and Ralph B. Holter, the latter billed as the boy wonder violinist and is really all of that, is well selected.

Among other things we need a truant officer as attendance was very poor last year, many not even drawing apportionment. It is a waste of money to hire an able teacher, have two buses to haul children to school and the best equipment and then only a few taking advantage of this great opportunity.

Vatican City, July 9.—(U.P.)—Cardinal Vannutelli, senior member of the sacred college, grew steadily weaker today, although he remained conscious. The cardinal was disinclined to talk to relatives and friends around his bed, as he had during past days, but signed several documents relating to his office during the morning. A later report gave news of his death.

Asking Favors

When recently a woman was faintly asked to grant a simple favor, she gently replied, "Here's a formula I apply when I need help: I ask myself whether or not I should be happy to do this for someone else. If I should, I don't hesitate to ask. So, thank you for giving me this pleasure."

Tacks and Plaster

These two articles do not go together so well, but if the tack is pushed first into a cake of soap and then driven into the plaster you will find it will help greatly to prevent the plaster from cracking or breaking.

Regular Hours Best

Keeping regular hours is necessary to good health. Nature will not be trifled with. Loss of sleep can never be made up, no matter how long a person may sleep later. It is even claimed that sleeping in the daytime is never as beneficial as sleeping at night.

KISS FOR THE PRESENT

"My firm is sending me to Canada," said the young commercial traveler, calling on his young lady. "Oh, Jack," she cried, "does that mean that you want me to go with you?" "Well, not exactly, dear," he replied. "I called round to ask if you'd kiss me farewell—for the present." The girl looked mystified for a second or two. "Of course, I'll kiss you, dear," she replied, "but where's the present?"—London Answers.

"Houses" of Red Indians

American Indians did not build log houses before the coming of the white man. That is, they did not build log houses in the sense that the settlers did later. But many tribes built wooden houses, composed of poles for framework, and walls and roofs of bark and thatchwork. A few tribes even put logs together for their habitations, but they did not put them together after the fashion of the regular log house.

Vatican City, July 9.—(U.P.)—Cardinal Vannutelli, senior member of the sacred college, grew steadily weaker today, although he remained conscious.

Asking Favors

When recently a woman was faintly asked to grant a simple favor, she gently replied, "Here's a formula I apply when I need help: I ask myself whether or not I should be happy to do this for someone else. If I should, I don't hesitate to ask. So, thank you for giving me this pleasure."

Tacks and Plaster

These two articles do not go together so well, but if the tack is pushed first into a cake of soap and then driven into the plaster you will find it will help greatly to prevent the plaster from cracking or breaking.

Regular Hours Best

Keeping regular hours is necessary to good health. Nature will not be trifled with. Loss of sleep can never be made up, no matter how long a person may sleep later. It is even claimed that sleeping in the daytime is never as beneficial as sleeping at night.

"My firm is sending me to Canada," said the young commercial traveler, calling on his young lady.

The girl looked mystified for a second or two.

"Of course, I'll kiss you, dear," she replied, "but where's the present?"—London Answers.

"Houses" of Red Indians

American Indians did not build log houses before the coming of the white man. That is, they did not build log houses in the sense that the settlers did later. But many tribes built wooden houses, composed of poles for framework, and walls and roofs of bark and thatchwork. A few tribes even put logs together for their habitations, but they did not put them together after the fashion of the regular log house.

The President's Challenge

FROM the immediate response which the country has given him, President Hoover must see how eager and even impatient people have become in their desire that he assert his leadership, says the New York Times. For a long time his friends have apologetically explained his seeming inaction, despite repeated affronts from congress. They have said that Mr. Hoover naturally hoped to avoid anything like an open breach with the senate. So long as it was possible, his aim was to conciliate and co-operate. But when the time came, so his intimates have asserted, for his forbearance to have reached the breaking point, he would take his courage in both hand and, in effect, appeal to the country as against those enemies of his in congress—even in his own party—who were trying to humiliate and hamstring his administration.

The course which Mr. Hoover has taken is full of hazards, but also of honors. A bold and unflinching president, resolute in upholding the reputation of his position and in standing for the welfare of the whole country as against any mere group or clique, never hurt by the antagonism of the senate. That fact has been demonstrated again and again in our political annals. More than once the senate in its endeavors to belittle a president has made him seem all the greater in the public eye. Mr. Hoover is not a man to balance such considerations nicely. He is thinking mainly of the job in his hands. But he will find, if he persists in the direct and aggressive manner which he has adopted in this instance, that the American people still believe that "power clings to him who power exerts."

Brainerd Church Directory

CHURCHES of the city have joined in printing and distributing a church directory, placing the large card in hotels, restaurants, oil stations, at lake resorts, etc., and thus aiding tourists who wish to worship in their respective churches.

In its foreword, the directory states: "For the convenience of those who though away from home and the home church, still feel the impulse to worship God and to meet with His people on the Lord's day, the following churches of Brainerd have arranged this directory. You will find a welcome at the church of your choice. If any of the Brainerd pastors can be of service in any way they will count it a privilege to do so."

The churches and organizations listed, pastor, hours of service, location of church and pastor's residence, telephone numbers, etc., include the American Sunday School Union, Bethlehem Lutheran, First Baptist, First Congregational, First Evangelical Lutheran, First Methodist, First Presbyterian, Full Gospel Assembly, Norwegian-Danish Lutheran, Salvation Army, Seventh Day Adventist, St. Francis Roman Catholic, St. Paul's Episcopal, Swedish Baptist, Swedish Bethany, Y. M. C. A., Zion Evangelical, Zion Evangelical Lutheran.

The directory supplies valuable information and serves to continue the church going which might otherwise be interrupted were the tourist unable to find the particular church of his choice.

Man comes close to God in the great out-of-doors of our lake region, but he needs also the spiritual communion and fellowship of the church for instruction, guidance, comfort and salvation.

Hot Days on the Farm

THE city dweller and city worker may think they face hot days working and living in stuffy rooms, but the farmer faces hot weather, too.

Haying is carried on when the sun beats down his merciless rays. Of all the farm occupations, haying is the hardest job and offers no escape from the heat. Grass grows in the open and a hay meadow was never a success when dotted with a lot of trees.

Men and horses yearn for the noon hour when there is a short respite, but sometimes when a thunder storm is in the offing work is carried on right through to save the precious hay crop.

It takes a philosophical temperament to withstand heat. If you fret and worry about it, your frame of mind will raise your bodily temperature a number of degrees. Housewives bending over hot stoves, ironing or washing, are confronted with heat problems and only the woman with an equable temper and steady nerves can survive the ordeal with any degree of comfort.

Concerning the head of the household, titular head, is faced with the enervating problem of mowing the lawn and this in a small degree compares with the farmer's job of haying.

One thing is certain, the heat is distributed and when one suffers, we all suffer. The only respite is to hurry to the lakes and dive into the cooling waters.

At the "Y"

EXTENSIVE improvements and repairs have been made at the Y. M. C. A. building. These include painting and calsoining, new plaster in several rooms, etc., all this work being done gratuitously by the Northern Pacific railway company as their annual donation to Brainerd's community center.

The city water and light department is laying a new water line to the building which will give the "Y" some of the best shower bath facilities in the city. This improvement comes at a time just when the tourist season draws heavily on that feature and puts the organization in shape to satisfy this growing demand.

An information bureau is maintained at the "Y" for tourists and other visitors and in the last several days there have been scores of inquiries about the lake country.

Junior members of the "Y" are following a summer program prepared by the secretary, I. L. Peterson, and which embraces hikes, camping and rendering service to business men, etc.

ROCHESTER airport has been given an "A-1-A" classification this year by the Department of Commerce. This classification means to pilots that any and every service they may require awaits them there. It includes a properly lighted landing field, large enough, clear of snow in winter and dry in summer with weather reports available and hangars in good shape.

CHISHOLM is about to separate its tourist park from its city park and thus give to the former a separate entity.

NIGHT baseball has proven a success in Little Falls.

DAIRY

WARM MILK BEST BACTERIAL HOME

High Counts Usually Result of Dirty Utensils.

"Bacteria get into milk only from the things with which the milk is handled," said Prof. J. D. Brew, to visitors at Cornell university. "Proper barn construction and equipment merely adds to the possibilities of making clean milk."

Bacteria grow in many liquids, and milk happens to be the most ideal of all. Like any other plant, provided with enough food and moisture, they grow rapidly at warm temperatures, and most of the exceedingly high counts are the result of growth due to poor cooling.

The next important cause of high counts is improperly cleaned utensils. Usually the greatest bacterial contamination comes from the more or less invisible parts of any utensils of equipment.

About 1 to 2 per cent of all miscellaneous high counts are due to under infection. Often under troubles are apparent, but at times an unsuspected under is causing the high count.

Dirt falling into the milk may also add numerous bacteria. The numbers added, however, depend upon the source of the dirt.

To produce milk with bacterial count consistently under 30,000, requires greater vigilance in operations. No chances whatever should be taken.

There is no excuse, in general, for counts being in excess of 100,000. It can be safely assumed that with efficient cooling of milk and proper cleaning and sterilizing of all utensils, at least 98 per cent of the counts should be under 100,000.

Brushes Preferred in

Washing Milk Utensils

Brushes are to be preferred to rags for use in washing dairy utensils, because they get into corners and crevices much better. The brushes should be carefully washed and allowed to dry, in the sun if possible, between the times when they are in use. A sour brush will often leave the utensil in a worse condition than before it was washed, causing the same vile, sour and musty odors to develop in the utensil that were present in the brush or rag.

All milk or cream utensils should be rinsed first of all with cold or lukewarm water. This step should never be omitted, for hot water introduced directly into milk vessels coagulates the albumin of the milk, forming a sticky layer over the surface which is very difficult to remove. The utensils rinsed as indicated should then be washed thoroughly in hot water containing a high grade of washing powder. The powder readily dissolves the layer of fat on the utensils, which is very difficult to remove in any other practicable way. The utensils should then be sterilized with steam or chemicals and allowed to dry thoroughly without the use of towels of any kind.

Use of Dry Skim Milk in Raising Dairy Calf

Many experiment stations have been working during the past few years on the use of dry skim milk in raising dairy calves. All are agreed that it is practical to do so where whole milk is sold at considerable premium over butterfat prices. Professor Bohstedt of the Wisconsin Station states that they have done sufficient work to be convinced that dry skim milk has a place in the ration for growing dairy calves. A bulletin has just been issued from the University Farm at St. Paul, Minnesota, on raising the dairy calf when whole milk is sold.

Dairy Notes

Don't allow dairy cows and laying hens to become fat.

Ground barley, fed with silage and hay, has been proved to be good feed for calves.

Practically every cow that holds a world's record of production is a large cow for her breed. Stunted calves make undersized cows.

Butter-fat prices, much lower than usual, have led some dairymen to try economizing by not using cottonseed meal where needed to balance the ration, or feeding native hay instead of alfalfa. This is poor economy.

High producing dairy cows frequently suffer a severe strain on their calcium reserve and need to have that reserve replenished.

Hay for dairy cows should be cut early. This applies to all hays but seems more important in the case of timothy and other grasses.

More food value per acre is obtained from pastures when they are not grazed too early or too closely. Early pastures, even though they are bulky, supply an abundance of protein.

Wealth Showered Upon Favorites of Fortune

An American artist named Mott traveled to the Pribilof Islands in a sealing vessel a year ago to paint some pictures of seals in their native home, and one day noticed a curious bank of sand lying close along the shore. He dug into it, and found beneath the sand a mass of bones. They were seal bones—millions of them—which had been flung up by the sea in the course of centuries. Further search has shown that there are miles of these bone deposits along the shores of the islands. One pile is a mile long, half a mile wide, and six feet deep. Now, bones are one of the best of all fertilizers, and the value of the find is simply gigantic—far greater than that of any gold mine. This brings to mind the case of the wandering prospector who, years ago, while crossing a desert in Wyoming, came across the body of a horse which, though it must have died long ago, was still fresh and sweet. The body was covered with a layer of fine dust, which the prospector recognized as borax. He saw the value of the discovery and sold it to a borax-packing firm in Chicago, who kept the secret for a long time. Today the uses of borax are innumerable, and range from the preservation of food down to dressings for tired feet and lotions for inflamed eyes.

Leaders of Tomorrow

Among Boys of Today

He is a person who is going to carry on what you have started. He is to sit right where you are sitting and—when you are gone—attend to those things you now think are so important.

You may adopt all the policies you please, but how they will be carried out depends upon him. Even if you make leagues and treaties, he will have to manage them. He will assume control of your cities, states and nation.

He is going to move in and take over your churches, schools, universities and commercial undertakings. All your work is going to be judged and passed on or condemned by him. Your reputation and your future are in his hands.

All your work is for him, says Boys Club magazine, and the fate of the nation and humanity is in his hands. So it might be as well to pay him some attention.

Dog Made Small Town Famous

Karasjok is a small town in northern Norway, above the sixty-ninth meridian in the center of the region known as Lapland. It lies a few miles west of the confluence of the Karasjok and Tana rivers, the latter forming the boundary between Norway and Finland.

The town's population is made up mostly of Laplanders and is the home of the Balto family, made famous by an Alaskan malamute, named in honor of one of the members of the family. Balto was the lead dog of Gunnar Kasson's famous team that carried diphtheria serum on the last 60-mile lap in the 600-mile sledge race from Nenana to Nome during the epidemic of February, 1925.

Music Helps Efficiency

As far back as 1886 the head of a southern factory, where cigarettes were rolled by hand, placed good singers in his workrooms to increase efficiency and contentment in the plant. There are today several hundred American industrial organizations that encourage musical activities among their employees. A survey conducted by the National Association for the Advancement of Music reports that 32 companies allow the musical programs to be conducted on company time, while 132 allow them to be conducted half on company time. Experiments prove that under the influence of music more work is done and fewer mistakes are made.

Put the Safe First

A man called on his stock broker and found him grumbling about lack of business and recent financial complications in the city.

He was about to leave his office for the day. As they were going out, the caller noticed that the door of the safe—a large, majestic piece of furniture—was open.

"Surely," said he, "you lock your safe for the night, don't you?"

"As a rule, yes," replied the broker, "but as things are at present, I would much rather that any one should take the contents than break the safe!"—St. John Telegraph Journal.

A Balfour Anecdote

An amusing anecdote is recalled about Lord Balfour and Lady Oxford concerning her rather sensational "Autobiography of Margot Asquith."

In it she speaks of him in a not too kind manner.

Meeting him shortly after its publication, she said, "I do hope you will forgive me for what I said about you in my book." Lord Balfour answered, "What book? I did not know you had written one."—Weekly Scotsman.

Whiskers

A large branch fell from a tree in the front yard of two-year-old Don.

"Whazzat?" said he, pointing to the twigs on the limb.

"Why, it's the tree's whiskers," answered his sister, with all the wisdom of her five years.

The President's Challenge

FROM the immediate response which the country has given him, President Hoover must see how eager and even impatient people have become in their desire that he assert his leadership, says the New York Times. For a long time his friends have apologetically explained his seeming inaction, despite repeated affronts from congress. They have said that Mr. Hoover naturally hoped to avoid anything like an open breach with the senate. So long as it was possible, his aim was to conciliate and co-operate. But when the time came, so his intimates have asserted, for his forbearance to have reached the breaking point, he would take his courage in both hand and in effect, appeal to the country as against those enemies of his in congress—even in his own party—who were trying to humiliate and hamstring his administration.

The course which Mr. Hoover has taken is full of hazards, but also of honors. A bold and unflinching president, resolute in upholding the reputation of his position and in standing for the welfare of the whole country as against any mere group or clique, never hurt by the antagonism of the senate. That fact has been demonstrated again and again in our political annals. More than once the senate in its endeavors to belittle a president has made him seem all the greater in the public eye. Mr. Hoover is not a man to balance such considerations nicely. He is thinking mainly of the job in his hands. But he will find, if he persists in the direct and aggressive manner which he has adopted in this instance, that the American people still believe that "power clings to him who power exerts."

Brainerd Church Directory

CHURCHES of the city have joined in printing and distributing a church directory, placing the large card in hotels, restaurants, oil stations, at lake resorts, etc., and thus aiding tourists who wish to worship in their respective churches.

In its foreword, the directory states: "For the convenience of those who though away from home and the home church, still feel the impulse to worship God and to meet with His people on the Lord's day, the following churches of Brainerd have arranged this directory. You will find a welcome at the church of your choice. If any of the Brainerd pastors can be of service in any way they will count it a privilege to do so."

The churches and organizations listed, pastor, hours of service, location of church and pastor's residence, telephone numbers, etc., include the American Sunday-School Union, Bethlehem Lutheran, First Baptist, First Congregational, First Evangelical Lutheran, First Methodist, First Presbyterian, Full Gospel Assembly, Norwegian-Danish Lutheran, Salvation Army, Seventh Day Adventist, St. Francis Roman Catholic, St. Paul's Episcopal, Swedish Baptist, Swedish Bethany, Y. M. C. A., Zion Evangelical, Zion Evangelical Lutheran.

The directory supplies valuable information and serves to continue the church going which might otherwise be interrupted were the tourist unable to find the particular church of his choice. Man comes close to God in the great out-of-doors of our lake region, but he needs also the spiritual communion and fellowship of the church for instruction, guidance, comfort and salvation.

Hot Days on the Farm

THE city dweller and city worker may think they face hot days working and living in stuffy rooms, but the farmer faces hot weather, too.

Haying is carried on when the sun beats down his merciless rays. Of all the farm occupations, haying is the hardest job and offers no escape from the heat. Grass grows in the open and a hay meadow was never a success when dotted with a lot of trees.

Men and horses yearn for the noon hour when there is a short respite, but sometimes when a thunder storm is in the offing work is carried on right through to save the precious hay crop.

It takes a philosophical temperament to withstand heat. If you fret and worry about it, your frame of mind will raise your bodily temperature a number of degrees. Housewives bending over hot stoves, ironing or washing, are confronted with heat problems and only the woman with an equable temper and steady nerves can survive the ordeal with any degree of comfort.

Concerning the head of the household, titular head, is faced with the enervating problem of mowing the lawn and this in a small degree compares with the farmer's job of haying.

One thing is certain, the heat is distributed and when one suffers, we all suffer. The only respite is to hurry to the lakes and dive into the cooling waters.

At the "Y"

EXTENSIVE improvements and repairs have been made at the Y. M. C. A. building. These include painting and calomining, new plaster in several rooms, etc., all this work being done gratuitously by the Northern Pacific railway company as their annual donation to Brainerd's community center.

The city water and light department is laying a new water line to the building which will give the "Y" some of the best shower bath facilities in the city. This improvement comes at a time just when the tourist season draws heavily on that feature and puts the organization in shape to satisfy this growing demand.

An information bureau is maintained at the "Y" for tourists and other visitors and in the last several days there have been scores of inquiries about the lake country.

Junior members of the "Y" are following a summer program prepared by the secretary, I. L. Peterson, and which embraces hikes, camping and rendering service to business men, etc.

ROCHESTER airport has been given an "A-1-A" classification this year by the Department of Commerce. This classification means to pilots that any and every service they may require awaits them there. It includes a properly lighted landing field, large enough, clear of snow in winter and dry in summer with weather reports available and hangars in good shape.

CHISHOLM is about to separate its tourist park from its city park and thus give to the former a separate entity.

NIGHT baseball has proven a success in Little Falls.

DAIRY

WARM MILK BEST BACTERIAL HOME

High Counts Usually Result of Dirty Utensils.

"Bacteria get into milk only from the things with which the milk is handled," said Prof. J. D. Brew, to visitors at Cornell university. "Proper barn construction and equipment merely adds to the possibilities of making clean milk."

Bacteria grow in many liquids, and milk happens to be the most ideal of all. Like any other plant, provided with enough food and moisture, they grow rapidly at warm temperatures, and most of the exceedingly high counts are the result of growth due to poor cooling.

The next important cause of high counts is improperly cleaned utensils. Usually the greatest bacterial contamination comes from the more or less invisible parts of any utensils of equipment.

About 1 to 2 per cent of all miscellaneous high counts are due to udder infection. Often udder troubles are apparent, but at times an unsuspected udder is causing the high count.

Dirt falling into the milk may also add numerous bacteria. The numbers added, however, depend upon the source of the dirt.

To produce milk with bacterial count consistently under 20,000, requires greater vigilance in operations. No chances whatever should be taken.

There is no excuse, in general, for counts being in excess of 100,000. It can be safely assumed that with efficient cooling of milk and proper cleaning and sterilizing of all utensils, at least 98 per cent of the counts should be under 100,000.

Brushes Preferred in Washing Milk Utensils

Brushes are to be preferred to rags for use in washing dairy utensils, because they get into corners and crevices much better. The brushes should be carefully washed and allowed to dry, in the sun if possible, between the times when they are in use. A sour brush will often leave the utensil in a worse condition than before it was washed, causing the same vile, sour and musty odors to develop in the utensil that were present in the brush or rag.

All milk or cream utensils should be rinsed first of all with cold or lukewarm water. This step should never be omitted, for hot water introduced directly into milk vessels coagulates the albumin of the milk, forming a sticky layer over the surface which is very difficult to remove. The utensils rinsed as indicated should then be washed thoroughly in hot water containing a high grade of washing powder. The powder readily dissolves the layer of fat on the utensils, which is very difficult to remove in any other practicable way. The utensils should then be sterilized with steam or chemicals and allowed to dry thoroughly without the use of towels of any kind.

Use of Dry Skim Milk in Raising Dairy Calf

Many experiment stations have been working during the past few years on the use of dry skim milk in raising dairy calves. All are agreed that it is practical to do so where whole milk is sold at considerable premium over butterfat prices. Professor Bolstedt of the Wisconsin Station states that they have done sufficient work to be convinced that dry skim milk has a place in the ration for growing dairy calves. A bulletin has just been issued from the University Farm at St. Paul, Minnesota, on raising the dairy calf when whole milk is sold.

Dairy Notes

Don't allow dairy cows and laying hens to become fat.

Ground barley, fed with silage and hay, has been proved to be good feed for calves.

Practically every cow that holds a world's record of production is a large cow for her breed. Stunted calves make undersized cows.

Butter-fat prices, much lower than usual, have led some dairymen to try economizing by not using cottonseed meal where needed to balance the ration, or feeding native hay instead of alfalfa. This is poor economy.

High producing dairy cows frequently suffer a severe strain on their calcium reserve and need to have that reserve replenished.

Hay for dairy cows should be cut early. This applies to all hays but seems more important in the case of timothy and other grasses.

More food value per acre is obtained from pastures when they are not grazed too early or too closely. Early pastures, even though they are bulky, supply an abundance of protein.

Wealth Showered Upon Favorites of Fortune

An American artist named Mott traveled to the Pribilof Islands in a sealing vessel a year ago to paint some pictures of seals in their native home, and one day noticed a curious bank of sand lying close along the shore. He dug into it, and found beneath the sand a mass of bones. They were seal bones—millions of them—which had been flung up by the sea in the course of centuries. Further search has shown that there are miles of these bone deposits along the shores of the islands. One pile is a mile long, half a mile wide, and six feet deep. Now, bones are one of the best of all fertilizers, and the value of the find is simply gigantic—far greater than that of any gold mine. This brings to mind the case of the wandering prospector who, years ago, while crossing a desert in Wyoming, came across the body of a horse which, though it must have died long ago, was still fresh and sweet. The body was covered with a layer of fine dust, which the prospector recognized as borax. He saw the value of the discovery and sold it to a local prospecting firm in Chicago, who kept the secret for a long time. Today the uses of borax are innumerable, and range from the preservation of food down to dressings for tired feet and lotions for inflamed eyes.

Leaders of Tomorrow Among Boys of Today

He is a person who is going to carry on what you have started. He is to sit right where you are sitting and—when you are gone—attend to these things you now think are so important.

You may adopt all the policies you please, but how they will be carried out depends upon him. Even if you make leagues and treaties, he will have to manage them. He will assume control of your cities, states and nation.

He is going to move in and take over your churches, schools, universities and commercial undertakings. All your work is going to be judged and passed on or condemned by him. Your reputation and your future are in his hands.

All your work is for him, says Boys Club magazine, and the fate of the nation and humanity is in his hands. So it might be as well to pay him some attention.

Dog Made Small Town Famous

Karasjok is a small town in northern Norway, above the sixty-ninth meridian in the center of the region known as Lapland. It lies a few miles west of the confluence of the Karasjok and Tana rivers, the latter forming the boundary between Norway and Finland.

The town's population is made up mostly of Laplanders and is the home of the Balto family, made famous by an Alaskan malamute, named in honor of one of the members of the family. Balto was the lead dog of Gunnar Kasson's famous team that carried diphtheria serum on the last 60-mile lap in the 600-mile sledge race from Nenana to Nome during the epidemic of February, 1925.

Music Helps Efficiency

As far back as 1886 the head of a southern factory, where cigarettes were rolled by hand, placed good singers in his workrooms to increase efficiency and contentment in the plant. There are today several hundred American industrial organizations that encourage musical activities among their employees. A survey conducted by the National Association for the Advancement of Music reports that 32 companies allow the musical programs to be conducted on company time, while 132 allow them to be conducted half on company time. Experiments prove that under the influence of music more work is done and fewer mistakes are made.

Put the Safe First

A man called on his stock broker and found him grumbling about lack of business and recent financial complications in the city.

He was about to leave his office for the day. As they were going out, the caller noticed that the door of the safe—a large, majestic piece of furniture—was open.

"Surely," said he, "you lock your safe for the night, don't you?"

"As a rule, yes," replied the broker, "but as things are at present, I would much rather that any one should take the contents than break the safe!"—St. John Telegraph Journal.

A Balfour Anecdote

An amusing anecdote is recalled about Lord Balfour and Lady Oxford concerning her rather sensational "Autobiography of Margot Asquith."

In it she speaks of him in a not too kind manner.

Meeting him shortly after its publication, she said, "I do hope you will forgive me for what I said about you in my book." Lord Balfour answered, "What book? I did not know you had written one."—Weekly Scotsman.

Whiskers

A large branch fell from a tree in the front yard of two-year-old Don.

"Whazzat?" said he, pointing to the twigs on the limb.

"Why, it's the tree's whiskers," answered his sister, with all the wisdom of her five years.

TUNING UP ROUNDS ON EVE OF 34th NATIONAL OPEN

140 GOLFERS ARE AT INTERLACHEN'S BAKED FAIRWAYS

SLOW GREENS AND HEAVY ROUGH PROVIDES TRIAL FOR MAJORITY

ALL AGREE 4 PAR ROUNDS WOULD CERTAINLY WIN THE TITLE

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)

Interlachen Country Club, Minneapolis, Minn., July 9—Interlachen's sun baked fairways called out 140-odd golfers today for their final tuning up rounds on the eve of the 34th National Open championship.

The Interlachen course, with its slow greens and heavy rough has provided such a trial for the majority of those present that all agreed four par rounds—an aggregate of 228—would certainly win the title.

Everyone in the field was looking forward to at least one more practice session before the opening tee shots on Thursday morning.

A majority of the leading pros and amateurs for the championship held that the course, while not as difficult as the dreaded one at Oakmont, was harder to play than Winged Foot, where Bobby Jones won the title last summer. The slow green, in particular, has many of the contestants cursing, while an excursion into the stubbly rough means almost inevitably the loss of a stroke.

Bobby Jones who wears golf's triple crown, rules a strong favorite on the eve of the tournament.

Two "books" have made their appearance at Interlachen, one quoting the Atlanta at odds of 7 to 5, while the other offers 8 to 5 against Bobby successfully defending his title.

Some of the other prevailing odds against the favorites are:

Leo Diegel 12 to 5.
Horton Smith 4 to 1.
Walter Hagen 4 to 1.
Gene Sarazen 6 to 1.
Al Espinosa 6 to 1.
Henry Clui 8 to 1.
Whiffy Cox 8 to 1.

The low odds against Clui and Cox reflect the brilliant performances of this pair of eastern professionals on Tuesday, when both went around the course in 69 to establish a new course record for Interlachen.

Tommy Armour, former open champion, and Al Watrous are quoted at 10 to 1, with Ed Dudley, Shawnee's conqueror, at the same price.

There is more betting on an open golf championship than the general public realizes, but it is a tribute to the cleanliness of the game that it never has been known to affect the outcome of a tournament.

The prohibitive odds against Bobby Jones indicate that it is once more a case of the Atlantan against the field, and Bobby's play has justified this estimate of his ability. Yesterday, for all he eased up and loafed through a complimentary match with officials of the U. S. G. A., he was hitting his long irons with greater freedom and accuracy than he had in a long time. Jones found cause for satisfaction in that round, even if he did take more than 80 to get home.

But the man to watch, the old timer who is likely to come back into his own is Walter Hagen. "The Haig" was hot as English mustard yesterday. Although he played only the first nine, his 32 strokes for the first nine might easily have been cut to 28 had some long putts of his which lipped the cup gone down.

Hagen is hitting the ball with a punch which has been missing from his game for a long time. The indolent swing which marked Walter's play of late has vanished, and it is a rejuvenated and serious Hagen who will tee off Thursday. If anyone is to shatter the Jones dynasty, it may be "Sir Walter."

There are many at Interlachen today who like the chances of Densmore Shute, the mild-mannered, curly-haired pro from Ohio, who had such a splendid chance to win the championship at Winged Foot when Bob Jones let up. Shute professes a fondness for the Interlachen lay-out, and his scores have demonstrated that he can master it.

Then there is Tommy Armour, who has been scoring consistently in par figures or better, who must not be overlooked. The slender Scot, master of iron play, might easily return to the glory that was his at Oakmont a few years ago.

In addition to Dr. O. F. Willing, Francis Quimet and Roland MacKenzie, the Walker cup amateurs who withdrew, there were still six eligible pros unheard from this morning. One or two were expected to put in a belated appearance today, so that the field which starts on the quest of the championship tomorrow probably will number 142 or 143.

CUBS MAY GET BACK TO FIRST PLACE

BY DEFEATING CINCINNATI, IF BROOKLYN LOSES TO BOSTON

IF WASHINGTON LOSES 2 GAMES, PHILADELPHIA WILL REGAIN LEAD

(By United Press)

The Philadelphia Athletics and Chicago Cubs, 1929 major league pennant winners and runners-up in the current campaign, today were faced with the opportunity to regain the leadership of their respective leagues.

The Cubs, now 1-2 game behind the Brooklyn Robins, can take first place in the National league by defeating Cincinnati, if Brooklyn loses to Boston. Washington must lose both games of a doubleheader with Boston to enable Philadelphia to take the American league lead.

Veteran Tom Zachary, former Senator and Yankee star who was waived out of the American league, cut Brooklyn's lead yesterday when he held the Robins to 9 well scattered hits and gave Boston a 4 to 1 victory.

The Cubs rested after 3 consecutive defeats at the hands of Cincinnati and profited by the Boston victory.

Washington ran its winning streak to 9 consecutive games, defeating Boston, 6 to 5. Heinie Manush's homer with a mate on base in the seventh provided the winning runs.

New York prevented Philadelphia from regaining a tie for first, defeating the Athletics, 9 to 4, in the second game of a doubleheader, after dropping the opener, 4 to 0.

Fred Lyons pitched and batted the Chicago White Sox to a 3 to 2 triumph over Detroit, driving in two of his club's runs with a triple in the second inning. It was the twelfth victory of the season for Lyons who now leads both major leagues in games won.

Cleveland's Indians returned to form and pounded out a 12 to 6 victory over the St. Louis Browns. Morgan led the Indians attack with two doubles and a home run, driving in 4 runs and scoring two.

The Philadelphia Phillies broke a 6-game losing streak, defeating the New York Giants, 8 to 1. Phil Collins shut out the Giants until the ninth, when the New Yorkers combined 4 of their 10 hits for a run.

Ray Kremer turned in his 11th victory of the season, pitching the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 10 to 5 victory over St. Louis.

American Association Tabs
St. Paul, July 9—Kansas City and St. Paul were even in their series today. The Blues took yesterday's encounter, 6 to 2. The Saints got 11 hits to 9 for Kansas City.

Columbus, July 9—Scoring six runs in the fourth inning, the Louisville Colonels entrenched themselves more firmly in the top hole of the American Association yesterday by defeating Columbus, 14 to 8.

Indianapolis, July 9—Four pitchers could not stem the tide of Indianapolis hits yesterday, and the Indians took the second game of the series, 12 to 6, from Toledo.

Minneapolis, July 9—Mike Gonzales smashed a double to left field, bringing in two runners, and enabled Minneapolis to take the second series game from Milwaukee, 4 to 3.

TUNING UP ROUNDS ON EVE OF 34th NATIONAL OPEN

140 GOLFERS ARE AT INTERLACHEN'S BAKED FAIRWAYS

SLOW GREENS AND HEAVY ROUGH PROVIDES TRIAL FOR MAJORITY

ALL AGREE 4 PAR ROUNDS WOULD CERTAINLY WIN THE TITLE

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)

Interlachen Country Club, Minneapolis, Minn., July 9—Interlachen's sun baked fairways called out 140-odd golfers today for their final tuning up rounds on the eve of the 34th National Open championship.

The Interlachen course, with its slow greens and heavy rough has provided such a trial for the majority of those present that all agreed four par rounds—an aggregate of 228—would certainly win the title.

Everyone in the field was looking forward to at least one more practice session before the opening tee shots on Thursday morning.

A majority of the leading pros and amateurs for the championship held that the course, while not as difficult as the dreaded one at Oakmont, was harder to play than Winged Foot, where Bobby Jones won the title last summer. The slow green, in particular have many of the contestants cursing, while an excursion into the stubbly rough means almost inevitably the loss of a stroke.

Bobby Jones who wears golf's triple crown, rules a strong favorite on the eve of the tournament.

Two "books" have made their appearance at Interlachen, one quoting the Atlanta at odds of 7 to 5, while the other offers 8 to 5 against Bobby successfully defending his title.

Some of the other prevailing odds against the favorites are:

Leo Diegel 2 to 5.
Horton Smith 4 to 1.
Walter Hagen 4 to 1.
Gene Sarazen 6 to 1.
Al Espinosa 6 to 1.
Henry Ciuci 8 to 1.
Whiffy Cox 8 to 1.

The low odds against Ciuci and Cox reflect the brilliant performances of this pair of eastern professionals on Tuesday, when both went around the course in 69 to establish a new course record for Interlachen.

Tommy Armour, former open champion, and Al Watrous are quoted at 10 to 1, with Ed Dudley, Shawnee's conqueror, at the same price.

There is more betting on an open golf championship than the general public realizes, but it is a tribute to the cleanliness of the game that it never has been known to affect the outcome of a tournament.

The prohibitive odds against Bobby Jones indicate that it is once more a case of the Atlanta against the field, and Bobby's play has justified this estimate of his ability. Yesterday, for all he eased up and loafed through a complimentary match with officials of the U. S. G. A., he was hitting his long irons with greater freedom and accuracy than he had in a long time. Jones found cause for satisfaction in that round, even if he did take more than 80 to get home.

But the man to watch, the old timer who is likely to come back into his own is Walter Hagen. "The Haig" was hot as English mustard yesterday. Although he played only the first nine, his 32 strokes for the first nine might easily have been cut to 28 had some long putts of his which lipped the cup gone down.

ATHLETICS, CUBS STRIVE TO REGAIN LEADERSHIP

Hagen is hitting the ball with a punch which has been missing from his game for a long time. The indolent swing which marked Walter's play of late has vanished, and it is a rejuvenated and serious Hagen who will tee off Thursday. If anyone is to shatter the Jones dynasty, it may be "Sir Walter."

There are many at Interlachen today who like the chance of Densmore Shute, the mild-mannered, curly-haired pro from Ohio, who had such a splendid chance to win the championship at Winged Foot when Bob Jones let up. Shute professes a fondness for the Interlachen lay-out, and his scores have demonstrated that he can master it.

Then there is Tommy Armour, who has been scoring consistently in par figures or better, who must not be overlooked. The slender Scot, master of iron play, might easily return to the glory that was his at Oakmont a few years ago.

In addition to Dr. O. F. Willing, Francis Quimet and Roland MacKenzie, the Walker cup amateurs who withdrew, there were still six eligible pros unheard from this morning. One or two were expected to put in a belated appearance today, so that the field which sets out tomorrow probably will number 142 or 143.

An Old Master's Effort

THIS year Walter Hagen decided not to defend his British Open championship. True, he was enjoying a prosperous exhibition tour of Japan and the Antipodes in company with the greatest of all trick shot artists, Joe Kirkwood. But had the "Haig" been so disposed, he could have hurried over to Hoylake. Instead, he returned to the United States weeks ago to practice seriously for the American Open which is being played this week on the Interlachen links at Minneapolis.

Ten annual U. S. Opens have become history since Hagen captured that event in a play-off with "Mike" Brady back in 1919. He was tied with Fred McLeod for runner-up in 1921, but both were nine strokes behind "Jim" Barnes the winner. It was in 1914, that Sir Walter won that event first overseas for the British play this Spring. Instead, he has been grooming himself for the Interlachen competition this week.

If both Hagen and Sarazen are in their best form as a result of this studied training, Bobby Jones will have to be his super-self in order to retain the crown which he won in the play-off with Al Espinosa at Winged Foot last June. The "Haig" will mark an ardent attempt to win at Interlachen backed by weeks of the only serious training he has undertaken in years. It will be an old master's effort to reestablish his place in golfdom's sun.

DAIRY FACTS

RULES GIVEN FOR RAISING CALVES

Nothing Better for Youngsters Than Whole Milk.

Nothing can take the place of whole milk, in part at least, in rearing good calves. Milk contains the vitamins, minerals and proteins which promote well-balanced growth. While it may be advisable to use supplements, and possibly to depend wholly upon substitutes, milk-fed calves always show superior quality, and those who appreciate good calves are apt to feed more milk.

Many dairymen follow what is called the minimum whole milk plan. By this method enough is fed to insure a good calf, but not enough to make the calf expensive. As enough young cows are coming on, only calves from ancestors of good records may well go for veal. Nothing equals whole milk to put gains on veal calf.

The prime purpose in feeding is to give the minimum amount of whole milk necessary to give the calf a good start and in the meantime to get it to eating hay and grain. Some calves will get on without milk at an earlier age than others. With ordinarily vigorous calves, the removal of milk from the ration may begin at from 45 to 50 days, and the change completed in about ten days more. With less vigorous calves the complete withdrawal of milk should be delayed.

Under this plan, from 400 to 500 pounds of milk will be enough to raise a calf. This provides for feeding about ten pounds of milk a day. In addition to the milk, a calf will require about 500 pounds of hay during the first six months. Calves fed thus have little digestive trouble, and considering the cost and the necessary care in using substitutes, some regard such a plan of whole-milk feeding as most satisfactory. It is certainly preferable to the careless or indifferent use of substitutes.

No Increase in Value

by Grinding Cow's Feed

Grinding of any feed does not increase the food value of that feed. A bulky roughage ground to a fine pulp does not make a concentrate out of it. Successful dairymen thoroughly understand this fact in feeding their dairy cattle. Neither the cow nor the grinder is a thing of magic and capable of using a roughage as a concentrate or making a concentrate of a roughage.

In grinding feed for the dairy cows recommended steps to follow are:

To let the cost of grinding govern the amount of roughage grinding done;

To not feed ground roughages as a concentrate;

To grind small grain for dairy cows but not to a meal; and

To not grind small grain for baby calves.

Cows on Short Pastures

Need Some Grain Feeds

Much has been said and written about supplementary feeding of dairy cows when pastures are short. Further evidence of the necessity of such feeding has recently been obtained by the bureau of dairy industry of the United States Department of Agriculture at its dairy experiment farm at Beltsville, Md. A half-acre plot of pasture grass was mowed at 10-day intervals and the grass weighed. In May, when conditions were most favorable for the growth of the grass, 420 pounds were obtained in one 10-day period; in August, during a dry spell, the yield for a similar period was only 11 pounds. It is evident, therefore, that under such short-pasture conditions, cows should be fed as heavily as during the winter.

Vitamin D in Cod Liver Oil Found Impractical

Cattle cannot use vitamin D in cod liver oil as demonstrated at the University of Wisconsin. Cows dropped in milk and fat production when the oil was added to the ration and increased production when it was removed. Alfalfa hay exposed three hours to bright sunlight at Madison, Wisconsin, was not sufficiently supplied with vitamin D to enable cows, giving 40 to 50 pounds milk daily, to keep up the lime content of their systems. An exposure of three days of bright sunlight at Madison gave good results in maintaining body lime as cows lost about a third of the amount they were losing previously. The cows were on a ration of hay, silage and a grain mixture.

How Much to Feed

How much grain and the kind of grains to feed to cows on pasture depend upon the condition of the cows and the condition of the grass. Thin cows will need more grain than those that are in good flesh, and as a rule will also need grain rations that are not quite as rich in protein as the latter. If the grass is still fairly fresh and succulent less protein is also needed in the grain ration than if the grass has become mature and scanty.

Beauty Now A Science

THE modern laboratory has supplanted the abacadabra of fakirs in the study of the nature of woman's beauty and the preparation of articles to preserve it. Chemical science of the highest order is today enlisted to solve the many problems presented by civilization and fashion. The stockings fact, for example, plus the use of artificial sun ray lamps has necessitated an entirely new study of the action of the skin under these conditions. Above the subject is undergoing a standard Pinaud cosmetic test to determine the efficacy of a cream under the action of a sun ray lamp.

Hat and Frock Ensemble Designed for Children

Paris costumes for children are known by their simplicity of line and their perfection of detail—two qualities which give this little hat and frock ensemble illustrated its decidedly French touch. The sleeveless dress is cut on perfectly straight lines, and it depends wholly on tiny tucks, scalloped edgings and two pert shoulder bows for that captivating originality which every child's dress should have. It is pictured here in a fine printed lawn with small orange flowers scattered evenly over a white background. The orange note is repeated in the plain lawn which binds the scallops and makes the bows. As for the hat, it is right up to the minute not only because of its youthful brim but because it uses the same materials and the same scalloped motif as the dress. The button-on crown is made of printed lawn and the brim of plain.—Woman's Home Companion.

Coat Waistline Marks

Season's Wrap Fashion

Coats show a decided interest in waistlines. Belted coats are much in vogue, and where belts are not, tucks at the sides or in the back nip in the garment at the waistline and produce an attractive break in otherwise straight lines.

This style of garment is, of course, one to be bought with care. It isn't every figure that can afford to accent its waistline. There are few waistlines, however, that cannot be indicated by a subtle nipping in which does not in any way overemphasize them.

A coat with a nipped-in waistline, accomplished by means of a series of little tucks at either side running a little above the waist and a little below to pinch it in slightly, is among the season's models. Pointed lapels and double-breasted opening give this model originated by Chanel a swagger air.

In black, navy, dark brown or green, this coat is quite correct for town wear. In lighter colors, white, beige, suntan, it takes its place among spectator sports apparel.

Sardines on Toast an

Appreciated Delicacy

Sardines become the delicacies they are only after preliminary scientific preparation. Caught "on the run," as it were, the sardines are taken in netfuls from the salt waters off the coast of Maine to the canneries of that state, where they are given the "sun cure" and steam boiled. Then they are tucked into little tins brimming over with oil or, less frequently, filled with tomato sauce or with mustard.

One of the largest chains of restaurants in America makes an occasional feature of sardines on toast.

Put two tablespoonsful of butter in a pan to melt. Add two tablespoonsful of flour. Stir until smooth and browned a little. Add a half cup of soup stock. Stir until thick. Then add a cup of sardines from which the bones and skin have been removed. Serve very hot on rounds of toast.

Complete Ensembles Are

Fashionable for Girls

Even at the tender age of six the young fashionable has a complete ensemble. One especially smart is made with basket-weave tweed coat in a pastel shade with which is worn a mushroom hat of rough straw, trimmed with matching fabric. The dress is a straight line of matching shantung. The girl of fourteen likewise has her twirl ensemble. The coat is a belted, three-quarter style with scarf collar, and the frock is of soft sheer wool.

The ten-year-old girl wears a tweed jacket suit with sleeveless tuck-in blouse, and flared skirt. For the twelve-year-old there are cape coats of covert cloth in navy blue and other preferred colors.

New Nightie Fabrics in

Plaids, Floral Designs

It is no longer a simple and easy task to choose a nightgown, for the latest sleeping garments are made with princess lines, boleros, uneven hemlines—in fact, they are in the mode of the daytime dress, and consequently must be chosen most carefully. As for materials, it is not crepe de chine with a little lace either, for nylon, chiffon and parure are all fashionable. And the gowns are no longer in pure white, for the new fabrics are in plaids and dainty floral designs.

LIGHTS of NEW YORK

The City Underground.

To me, one of the most fascinating tours of New York can be made for a nickel on the front platform of a subway train. From a front window the subway is not as dark as it appears farther back in the train, and there are numberless things to watch and puzzle over. There are the signal lights, and the accompanying automatic blocks that prevent a train from colliding with another. Every so often there are illuminated boards with the letters SB on them. I tried for months to figure out what SB meant, but finally had to give up and asked some one. It means section break, and indicates to the motorman that one current supply ends and another begins there. I believe he is supposed to shut off his motors at this point.

At first—or even hundredth—glance it appears that every inch of the subway system is used. Platforms are jammed with waiting passengers, and no room is wasted.

New York's Speedway.

Park avenue, one of the principal streets in New York running north and south through the heart of the city, is really a speedway. Broadened a few years ago, this thoroughfare carries most of the rush hour traffic and in order to speed it up the police insist on all cars driving at a very fast rate. Therefore it is nothing unusual to see traffic moving through the center of New York at the rate of forty to forty-five miles an hour, without any protest from the police, but rather with encouragement.

About Manhattan.

Last Sunday I took a six-hour walk of about twenty miles around Manhattan, starting on the fashionable upper east side and working down through the slums. The slums are dirty, right enough, and crowded. But all the children on the streets appear to be well-fed and are warmly clad. And there is no begging there. It wasn't until I reached Park avenue at the completion of my jaunt that beggars, clad worse than the slum dwellers, approached me.

Hope for Seafarers.

That awful curse of the Twentieth century seafaring man, the ship's concert, may finally become a relic of the past, instead of a pest of the present. The word has got out that the United States lines, faced with strong competition for summer trade from new ships of other lines, have decided to take on a cabaret crew. And why not? Summer hotels have recently been enormously successful in hiring Broadway players as masters of ceremony and generals of social activity. The Broadway players, weary of tramping up and down looking for jobs that don't exist, welcome these opportunities to get away from it all. They will even take smaller salary than is customary for the opportunity of sporting around in flannel trousers and summer dresses at the more expensive resorts.

Big City Flashlights.

A sign on Forty-first street: "Blank's Steer Sandwiches, 5 cents." . . . The curious crowd always gathered about a very bad taxidermy exhibit in a Greenwich Village window on Sixth avenue. . . . DAIRY FACTS

RULES GIVEN FOR RAISING CALVES

Nothing Better for Youngsters Than Whole Milk.

Nothing can take the place of whole milk, in part at least, in rearing good calves. Milk contains the vitamins, minerals and proteins which promote well-balanced growth. While it may be advisable to use supplements, and possibly to depend wholly upon substitutes, milk-fed calves always show superior quality, and those who appreciate good calves are apt to feed more milk.

Many dairymen follow what is called the minimum whole milk plan. By this method enough is fed to insure a good calf, but not enough to make the calf expensive. As enough young cows are coming on, only calves from ancestors of good records may well go for veal. Nothing equals whole milk to put gains on veal calf.

The prime purpose in feeding is to give the minimum amount of whole milk necessary to give the calf a good start and in the meantime to get it to eating hay and grain. Some calves will get on without milk at an earlier age than others. With ordinarily vigorous calves, the removal of milk from the ration may begin at from 45 to 50 days, and the change completed in about ten days more. With less vigorous calves the complete withdrawal of milk should be delayed.

Under this plan, from 400 to 500 pounds of milk will be enough to raise a calf. This provides for feeding about ten pounds of milk a day. In addition to the milk, a calf will require about 500 pounds of grain and about 300 pounds of hay during the first six months. Calves fed thus have little digestive trouble, and considering the cost and the necessary care in using substitutes, some regard such a plan of whole-milk feeding as most satisfactory. It is certainly preferable to the careless or indifferent use of substitutes.

No Increase in Value by Grinding Cow's Feed

Grinding of any feed does not increase the food value of that feed. A bulky roughage ground to a fine pulp does not make a concentrate out of it. Successful dairymen thoroughly understand this fact in feeding their dairy cattle. Neither the cow nor the grinder is a thing of magic and capable of using a roughage as a concentrate or making a concentrate of a roughage.

In grinding feed for the dairy cows recommended steps to follow are:

- To let the cost of grinding govern the amount of roughage grinding done;
- To not feed ground roughages as a concentrate;
- To grind small grain for dairy cows but not to a meal; and
- To not grind small grain for baby calves.

Cows on Short Pastures Need Some Grain Feeds

Much has been said and written about supplementary feeding of dairy cows when pastures are short. Further evidence of the necessity of such feeding has recently been obtained by the bureau of dairy industry of the United States Department of Agriculture at its dairy experiment farm at Beltsville, Md. A half-acre plot of pasture grass was mowed at 10-day intervals and the grass weighed. In May, when conditions were most favorable for the growth of the grass, 420 pounds were obtained in one 10-day period; in August, during a dry spell, the yield for a similar period was only 11 pounds. It is evident, therefore, that under such short-pasture conditions, cows should be fed as heavily as during the winter.

Vitamin D in Cod Liver Oil Found Impractical

Cattle cannot use vitamin D in cod liver oil as demonstrated at the University of Wisconsin. Cows dropped in milk and fat production when the oil was added to the ration and increased production when it was removed.

Alfalfa hay exposed three hours to bright sunlight at Madison, Wisconsin, was not sufficiently supplied with vitamin D to enable cows, giving 40 to 50 pounds milk daily, to keep up the lime content of their systems. An exposure of three days of bright sunlight at Madison gave good results in maintaining body lime as cows lost about a third of the amount they were losing previously. The cows were on a ration of hay, silage and a grain mixture.

How Much to Feed

How much grain and the kind of grain to feed to cows on pasture depend upon the condition of the cows and the condition of the grass. Thin cows will need more grain than those that are in good flesh, and as a rule will also need grain rations that are not quite as rich in protein as the latter. If the grass is still fairly fresh and succulent less protein is also needed in the grain ration than if the grass has become mature and scanty.

Pittsburgh Anglers

Find Ferocious Bass

Little Hubert Lake abounds with Oswego green bass. The bottom formation has wonderful spawning fields for muskie, pike, bass and is apt to yield the largest catch of the season of any lake of its size in this part of the country. The green bass belongs to the large mouth bass family, grows often to very large size, 15 pounds and more, and is of great fighting qualities. He more than equals in ferocity the small mouthed black bass sometimes called pink eyed bass and in various parts of the country known as the tiger bass.

This is the story told by three fishermen who visited Chris Fritz's place on Little Hubert Lake. The three are James A. Robertson of the Fire Underwriters Association of Pittsburgh, Curtis Belford, auto salesman, and G. B. Laidlow, also of Pittsburgh.

Brainerd and district swimming beaches are safe from contaminating despite their use by large crowds in hot weather, Earl R. Berg, water safety director said today.

Thousands of swimmers have used the various beaches and lakes in the Brainerd area during the past week and similar numbers will continue to use them during the heat wave.

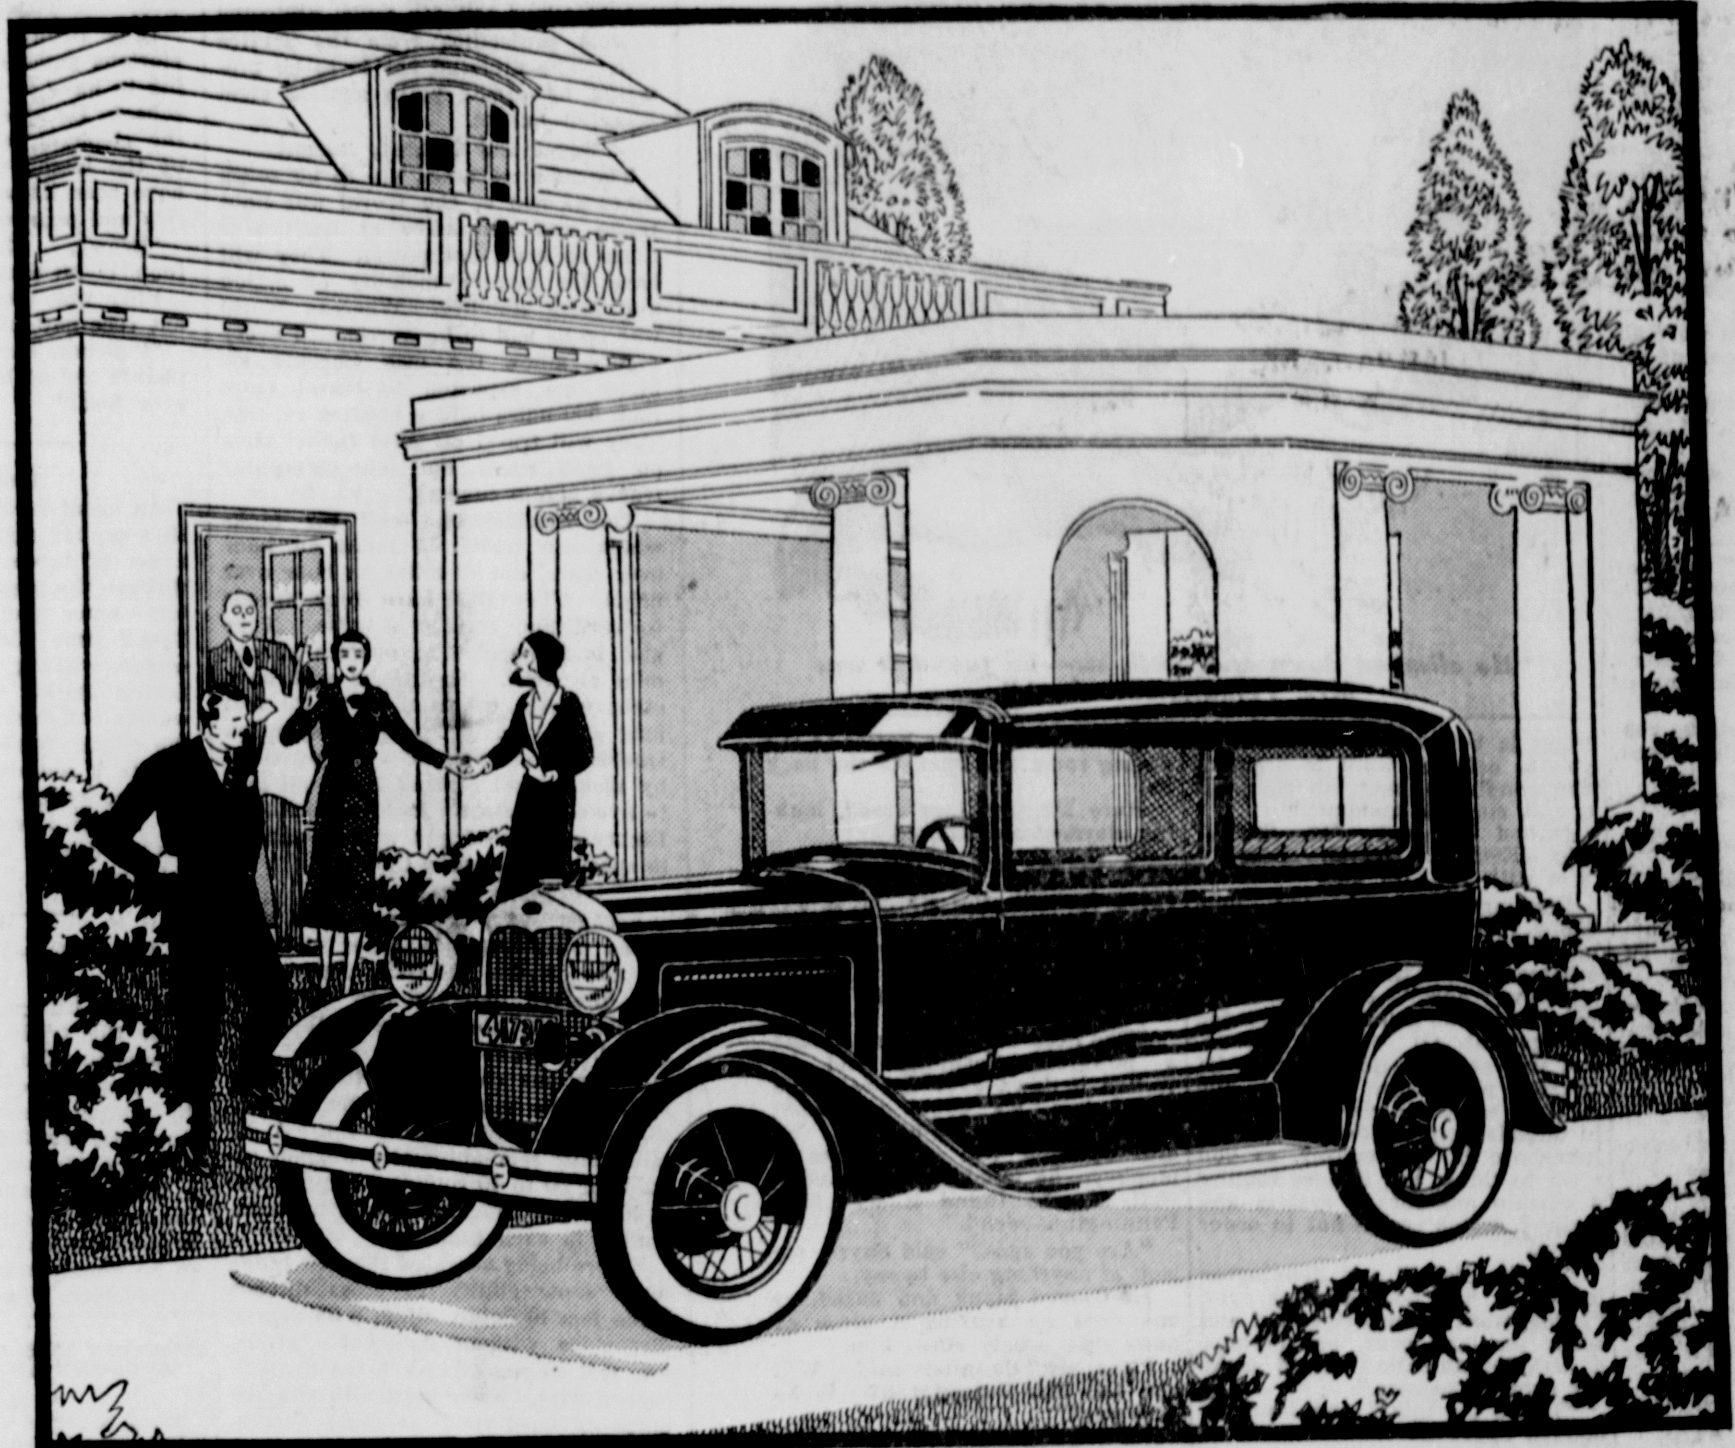

"The aeration, oxidation and agitation common to large lakes eliminates pollution. The only danger is of contact contamination at the actual time when many swimmers are in the water, close to each other at once," Mr. Berg explained in announcing that Lum Park and other places to swim are safe.

Pittsburgh Anglers

Find Ferocious Bass

Little Hubert Lake abounds with Oswego green bass. The bottom formation has wonderful spawning fields for muskie, pike, bass and is apt to yield the largest catch of the season of any lake of its size in this part of the country. The green bass belongs to the large mouth bass family, grows often to very large size, 15 pounds and more, and is of great fighting qualities. He more than equals in ferocity the small mouthed black bass sometimes called pink eyed bass and in various parts of the country known as the tiger bass.

"WHERE'S EMILY?"

by CAROLYN WELLS

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE.

ON the eve of her marriage to Rodney Sayre, Emily Duane disappears. She had left her Hilldale Park home, "Knollwood," to visit the hospital, but never reached there. Foul play is feared when Jim Pennington reports his wife, Pauline, and Emily's best friend, also missing. Pennington says he left his wife at the ravine, a short distance from the Duane home. When he returned she had vanished.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XV.

"YOU poor man!" exclaimed Betty. "How do you get along? You come over here for meals until the new cook comes."

Pennington smiled at her ready hospitality.

"Thank you," he said, "but we'll manage. Polly is efficient, you know, and the chauffeur's wife is cooking for us. They live over the garage and she's a good cook—but my domestic arrangements cannot interest you," he said to Lawlor.

"Then as far as I can see," the detective seemed to come out of a brown study, "those two women disappeared within a few moments of one another. It isn't logical to suppose their absences are entirely disconnected."

"And yet," Chief Jennings interposed, "if they had been together when it happened, I mean whatever did happen, accident or anything—one of them could have brought back the news."

"You're predicating something along the lines of a sprained ankle or broken leg," Pete Gibby declared. "Now, that isn't a probable explanation at all!"

"Indeed!" said Lawlor icily. "Just what is your notion of a probable explanation?"

"That the two of them were abducted or kidnapped by men of evil intent."

"Abductions of grown people are not often heard of," Lawlor began.

"Disappearances of well-to-do young women are not, either," Pete told him. "But there is a system of abductions."

"Oh, Pete, shut up!" Rodney cried out, as one in agony. "Do shut up, I can't stand everything!"

"Go on," urged Pennington. "What do you mean? If there's a theory, however awful, let us have it."

"Where these ladies wearing conspicuous jewelry?" Lawlor asked, suddenly.

"No," Pennington began, but Gibby interrupted:

"Yes, Miss Duane was. She had on a diamond necklace that Mr. Sayre gave her for a wedding present."

"Aha," and Lawlor looked like a man who has discovered all. "That's it, then."

"What's it?" demanded Sayre. "Suppose robbers did take that necklace, where are the two girls? You can't assume that they killed them and disposed of their bodies in this short time."

"Why not?" said Lawlor calmly. "You have hunted and searched for two live women, but no search has been made for dead ones."

"Look here, Mr. Lawlor," said Burton Lamb, "I understand your interest and your desire for action, but need you be quite so bluntly definite? Have you no consideration for the feelings of those near and dear to the missing ladies? Have you not even the common decency to speak a little less crudely?"

"I thought you wanted police work done," Lawlor said, sulkily. "I'm not in the habit of mincing words."

"Let him alone, Burt," Sayre said. "Neither Pennington nor myself cares how he expresses his fears. We're all apprehensive that a severe accident or sudden death has wrought this tragedy, and the sooner we begin real investigations the better. I propose that searching parties be organized at once, police, neighbors, volunteers, anybody who can look for the girls."

"He climbed down and, well, sir—he found it was Mrs. Pennington—dead."

I can picture them doing, why a passing motor might have been full of bandits, who—

"Needn't have been so many," said Gibby. "One bandit in a Ford car would have been enough to overpower Emily, grab the diamond chain—"

"Then Polly would have given the alarm," said Pennington. "Grant two bandits, Gibby."

"All right, two bandits, then. But some such thing happened."

"Go on," said Rodney, wearily. "What did the bandits do next?"

"Beat the girls up or left them unconscious, and made off with the loot."

"Oh, Pete, you're worse than the policemen!" cried Betty.

"Forgive me, I didn't mean to be. But that's how I see it."

Just then, Prall came in and whispered to Rodney, who rose and left the room with the butler.

"Mr. Jennings wants to see you, sir," Prall said, still softly.

The new machines will be modeled on the Christie combined wheel and track laying tank and armored car demonstrated to the army and members of congress last summer. The specifications call for tanks protected against projectiles from the service rifle. The armored car is to be protected by armor plate against steel jacketed bullets.

Speed and Stability Sought

The new machines are to be seven times as fast as the World war light tanks and will have at least four times as much fire power. They will have far greater mobility of action and more stability. Whereas World war tanks had to be overhauled every eighty miles, the new Christie vehicles are expected to travel more than 500 miles before needing repairs. They will travel on solid rubber tires on hard roads and on caterpillar tracks across country.

The specifications call for tanks which can travel 40 miles an hour over roads and 30 miles an hour over fields. They will have four speeds forward and one in reverse. They also must be able to operate at one mile an hour. The tanks will have eight wheels, be from 17 to 20 feet long, and have spring suspension tracks. Protection will be provided by nickel steel plating from one-half to five-eighths of an inch in thickness. Eighty gallons of gas will be carried in specially protected tanks.

Engines to Be in Rear

Because of trouble experienced with tanks not providing proper visibility for the drivers, the War department has directed that the new machines be built with the engine in the rear and the driver's place in front. The specifications call for a turret built so that the gunner can fire in any direction except directly up. A 37 millimeter semi-automatic weapon capable of 30 to 40 rounds a minute and a 30 caliber machine gun will be installed in each tank.

Before being accepted the new tanks must show ability to cross ditches three feet in depth, climb a 35 degree dirt slope without detachable grouse, and display ability to go through barbed wire. They must also run 100 miles on hard roads in eight successive hours.

Sayre followed the butler to the dining room and then to the back hall.

Here Mr. Jennings stood, looking alarmed and excited.

"I thought I'd better tell you first, sir," he said. "We were going back to the station to get the search party into shape, when, as we crossed the bridge over the ravine, Sergeant Murdock noticed the rail was broken away."

"Which ravine?"

"The little one, sir. And he had a powerful flashlight and he turned it down over the rail, and far below, we could see what looked like a huddled-up body. So Murdock—he can climb like a monkey—he climbed down and—well, sir, he found it was Mrs. Pennington—dead."

"Are you sure?" said Sayre, for lack of anything else to say.

He looked blank and dazed, as one does on hearing a piece of news that nearly stuns him.

"Yes, sir," Jennings said. "Will you tell Mr. Pennington? Is he here yet?"

"Yes he's here. He was just about to go home. Call Mr. Lamb over here, Prall."

Burton Lamb came, and saw with surprise the returned policeman.

"What have you found?" he said and Jennings told him.

"Will you tell Jim Pennington?" Sayre said.

"Good Lord, I can't! But yes, I will. And we must tell him at once. Who's left there—on the scene, Jennings?"

ARMY ASKS BIDS ON SIX FIGHTING TANKS

Wants Powerful But Light Armored Machines.

Washington, D. C.—Six fighting tanks of a type far superior to the World war machines with which the army now is equipped will be acquired by the War department within the next few months. Letters asking manufacturers to bid on contracts for constructing the new tanks and an armored car were sent out at the direction of Gen. Charles P. Summerall, army chief of staff. Delivery of these vehicles will give the army its first service protected tanks since World war days.

The new machines will be modeled on the Christie combined wheel and track laying tank and armored car demonstrated to the army and members of congress last summer. The specifications call for tanks protected against projectiles from the service rifle. The armored car is to be protected by armor plate against steel jacketed bullets.

Speed and Stability Sought

The new machines are to be seven times as fast as the World war light tanks and will have at least four times as much fire power. They will have far greater mobility of action and more stability. Whereas World war tanks had to be overhauled every eighty miles, the new Christie vehicles are expected to travel more than 500 miles before needing repairs. They will travel on solid rubber tires on hard roads and on caterpillar tracks across country.

The specifications call for tanks which can travel 40 miles an hour over roads and 30 miles an hour over fields. They will have four speeds forward and one in reverse. They also must be able to operate at one mile an hour. The tanks will have eight wheels, be from 17 to 20 feet long, and have spring suspension tracks. Protection will be provided by nickel steel plating from one-half to five-eighths of an inch in thickness. Eighty gallons of gas will be carried in specially protected tanks.

Engines to Be in Rear

Because of trouble experienced with tanks not providing proper visibility for the drivers, the War department has directed that the new machines be built with the engine in the rear and the driver's place in front. The specifications call for a turret built so that the gunner can fire in any direction except directly up. A 37 millimeter semi-automatic weapon capable of 30 to 40 rounds a minute and a 30 caliber machine gun will be installed in each tank.

Before being accepted the new tanks must show ability to cross ditches three feet in depth, climb a 35 degree dirt slope without detachable grouse, and display ability to go through barbed wire. They must also run 100 miles on hard roads in eight successive hours.

PLINY STIRRED TO WRATH

Those who have watched some volunteer fire companies in action will be amused by the fact that Pliny got all wrought up about this matter of fire-fighting back in 106 A. D.

Joseph T. Armstrong in the New Orleans Item-Tribune. In a letter to the Roman emperor Trajan, Pliny described a fire at Nicomedia, which consumed several homes, the town house and the temple of Isis.

Pliny indignantly blamed this damage in part to "the indolence of the people, who manifestly stood idle and motionless spectators of this terrible calamity." He said there were in the town "neither engineers, buckets nor any single instrument suitable for extinguishing fires," and recommended that a company of 150 firemen be formed.

White House Baths

"Charming Dolly Madison," one of the most gracious of White House mistresses, set aside rooms for bathing, and instituted the first Presidential bathtubs. These bathtubs remained in the White House only until the entrance of Andrew Jackson, first plebeian President, who promptly chucked them out of doors for representing something decidedly undemocratic, and therefore offensive to the common people. However, the bathtub returned with the fastidious Fillmore to remain evermore enshrined, although the Fillmore tub has long since been replaced.

Too Big to Lose

Billy Brown was dreaming of the glorious game of football he was going to have as soon as he got out of school. He wasn't a bit interested in the elephant, which was the subject of the lesson to which he ought to have been listening. The teacher saw this and pounced on him.

"Brown, where are elephants found?" he demanded sternly.

Billy was staggered for a moment, but rose gallantly to the occasion.

"P-please, sir," he stammered, "elephants are so big that they're hardly ever lost!"

Mental Test

An agent recently called on a north side mother trying to interest her in a set of books. Junior was peering through the pages so the caller showed him some pictures under "Mental Test." One picture was that of a wagon without the "handle." After asking Junior several questions the woman enlightened him by saying that the wagon didn't have a handle. Turning to a picture of a pig without a tail the youngster studied it intently for a few moments and said, "Why, the pig doesn't have a handle, either."

Great Names for Small Towns

That many Americans have traveled in Europe might be deduced from the trails of European names throughout the United States. Paris and Berlin are each to be found in 15 states, while seven undeveloped London, ranging in size from 100 to 4,000 population, might be visited in a domestic grand tour. Arkansas is the proud possessor of all three, and in addition has a Peking. Peking is to be found in four other states also.

"WHERE'S EMILY?"

by CAROLYN WELLS

WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE.

ON the eve of her marriage to Rodney Sayre, Emily Duane disappears. She had left her Hilldale Park home, "Knollwood," to visit the hospital, but never reached there. Foul play is feared when Jim Pennington reports his wife, Pauline, and Emily's best friend, also missing. Pennington says he left his wife at the ravine, a short distance from the Duane home. When he returned she had vanished.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XV.

"YOU were?" exclaimed Betty. "How do you get along? You come over here for meals until the new cook comes."

Pennington smiled at her ready hospitality.

"Thank you," he said, "but we'll manage. Polly is efficient, you know, and the chauffeur's wife is cooking for us. They live over the garage and she's a good cook—but my domestic arrangements cannot interest you," he said to Lawlor.

"Then as far as I can see," the detective seemed to come out of a brown study, "those two women disappeared within a few moments of one another. It isn't logical to suppose their absences are entirely disconnected."

"And yet," Chief Jennings interposed, "if they had been together when it happened, I mean what ever did happen, accident or anything—one of them could have brought back the news."

"You're predicating something along the lines of a sprained ankle or broken leg," Pete Gibby declared. "Now, that isn't a probable explanation at all!"

"Indeed!" said Lawlor icily. "Just what is your notion of a probable explanation?"

"That the two of them were abducted or kidnaped by men of evil intent—"

"Abductions of grown people are not often heard of," Lawlor began.

"Disappearances of well-to-do young women are not, either," Pete told him. "But there is a system of abductions—"

"Oh, Pete, shut up!" Rodney cried out, as one in agony. "Do shut up, I can't stand everything!"

"Go on," urged Pennington. "What do you mean? If there's a theory, however awful, let us have it."

"Where these ladies wearing conspicuous jewelry?" Lawlor asked, suddenly.

"No," Pennington asked, but Gibby interrupted:

"Yes, Miss Duane was. She had on a diamond necklace that Mr. Sayre gave her for a wedding present."

"Aha," and Lawlor looked like a man who has discovered all. "That's it, then."

"What's it?" demanded Sayre. "Suppose robbers did take that necklace, where are the two girls? You can't assume that they killed them and disposed of their bodies in this short time."

"Why not?" said Lawlor calmly. "You have hunted and searched for two live women, but no search has been made for dead ones."

"Look here, Mr. Lawlor," said Burton Lamb, "I understand your interest and your desire for action, but need you be quite so bluntly definite? Have you no consideration for the feelings of those near and dear to the missing ladies? Have you not even the common decency to speak a little less crudely?"

"I thought you wanted police work done," Lawlor said, sulkily. "I'm not in the habit of mincing words."

"Let him alone, Burt," Sayre said. "Neither Pennington nor myself cares how he expresses his fears. We're all apprehensive that a severe accident or sudden death has wrought this tragedy, and the sooner we begin real investigations the better. I propose that searching parties be organized at once, police, neighbors, volunteers, anybody who can look for the girls."

dead or alive. We dare not wait till morning. It's all very well to say that if one had been hurt or maimed the other could come to tell us. They may both be hurt, dying, even, and here we sit, palavering over the matter!"

"But what can we do in the dark, Mr. Sayre?" asked Lawlor, a little petulantly. "I think we must wait for daylight."

"You may, but I shan't," said Rodney, with determination. "Do you suppose I could go to bed? Or Mr. Pennington, either? No, we will go on another search. Anybody who can picture them doing, why a passing motor might have been full of bandits, who—"

"Needn't have been so many," said Gibby. "One bandit in a Ford car would have been enough to overpower Emily, grab the diamond chain—"

"Then Polly would have given the alarm," said Pennington. "Grant two bandits, Gibby."

"All right, two bandits, then. But some such thing happened."

"Go on," said Rodney, wearily. "What did the bandits do next?"

"Beat the girls up or left them unconscious, and made off with the loot."

"Oh, Pete, you're worse than the policemen!" cried Betty.

"Forgive me, I didn't mean to be. But that's how I see it."

Just then Prall came in and whispered to Rodney, who rose and left the room with the butler.

"Mr. Jennings wants to see you, sir," Prall said, still softly.

"Then as far as I can see," the detective seemed to come out of a brown study, "those two women disappeared within a few moments of one another. It isn't logical to suppose their absences are entirely disconnected."
